REGULATION (EU) 2024/3015 · APPLIES 14 DECEMBER 2027

EUFLR Readiness Tool

A free self-assessment for the EU Forced Labour Regulation

From 14 December 2027, products made with forced labour may not be placed on, made available on, or exported from the EU market. The ban applies to every company, of any size, in any sector. This tool shows how ready you are if an authority asks what you have done about it.

Inside the tool

1 Risk map
Your commodities and sourcing countries against public forced labour risk data. State-imposed forced labour is flagged.

2 Due diligence assessment
52 questions in eight modules, from governance to investigation readiness, each tied to the Commission's guidelines.

3 Gap analysis and roadmap
Gaps ranked by priority, each with a minimum action, a better-practice route and an indicative timeline.

4 Evidence log
A record of what you could show an authority, plus a simulated investigation of your highest-risk supply chain.

\+ Complaint response planner
If an authority writes to you: a plan for the 30 working days you have to respond.

Sources and standards

Regulation (EU) 2024/3015

Commission guidelines C/2026/4637, checked question by question

The 14 forced labour indicators and 10 state-imposed indicators in the guidelines

OECD due diligence guidance

ILO and US Department of Labor risk data, until the EU risk database is published

For smaller companies

Under 250 employees, the tool shows the lighter standard the Commission describes for SMEs wherever there is one. The ban itself applies in full.

Scope and limits

A ban, not a duty
The Regulation bans products. It creates no due diligence obligation, but authorities ask what you have done before they open an investigation.

Not a certificate
A strong result does not certify compliance or shield you from a decision. The tool is not legal advice.

Voluntary guidance
Results are measured against the Commission's non-binding guidelines. Questions that go beyond them are marked as such.

Private by design
